Supporting ROTC in Efficient Staff Recruitment

COMTek has been the sole provider of training support to the Cadet Command – ARMY Reserve Training Corps (ROTC) program since 2002. COMTek currently provides over 900 highly qualified contract employees, including civilians as well as retired officers from the ranks of Brigade Commanders, Colonels, and other levels of command, who deliver training services such as classroom instruction, physical training, and field training exercises, in over 277 colleges and universities nationwide.

Distance Learning for Training Efficiency and Cost Reduction

COMTek's training support services are specifically designed to assist customers in successfully achieving their mission goals, increasing training effectiveness, and reducing training costs.

COMTek training capabilities, coupled with its robust, global communications network, can be deployed to establish interactive distance learning applications that link instructors with students over vast, geographically diverse areas. Distance learning solutions are cost effective. Participants need only to have access to a broadband connection. They can be implemented either as a "live" solution that gives students direct and immediate interaction with the instructor and other students, or as an on-demand solution that enables participation at a time convenient to the student.

TRADOC for Better Curriculum, Analysis, Management and Development

Since 1996, COMTek has provided training support personnel to the U.S. Army's Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC), to oversee the establishing of the ARMY's training policies and procedures.

COMTek's personnel are highly trained individuals who design and develop curriculum, write lesson plans and training guides, produce training films, and teach the courses.

Our staff also manages training documentation, maintaining transcripts and statistics on completions and failures, in addition to making recommendations on course improvement.
